Aunt agnes as we called her was like a second mom to Robert, my husband, she cared for Robert and Patricia when they were small after their mom got sick and she kept us up on the news of his grandma Mollie Bandy until grandma left us. She used to bring strawberry shortcakes to the reunion for Robert and he would wait on her arrival. We visited and she showed me her wonderful collections and told me their history, she had done a lot of work on the history of the Moore family. She had those sparkling blue eyes an dI never met her Homer, but I felt like I knew him after she told me stories and showed me pictures of him. She was interested in memorials for coal miners and the preservation of history, she was a genteel southern lady that emanated love every moment I was with her. We loved her so much, she gave Robert and Patricia pictures of themselves as small chilren and made sure robert got books that Edward, his dad, had left with her from World War II. I know she is in Heaven with that beautiful smile and glory shining all around her now. Till we meet again dearest, all our love, we will always remember you!

Mrs. Harte taught me in the 2rd grade. I remember once when I was talking in class she took me to the front of the room made me stand in a corner on one foot with a book on my head, I never talked in class again without permission.She made class fun but inturn you learned. She was a wonderful teacher for which I had all respect for her.
