“ Mr. And Mrs Marris moved into the neighborhood when I was around 8 years old. Both of them were so kind and open hearted to me and all the family.

I would visit every day, maybe twice a day if Mrs. Marris was fixing hotdogs. She always made sure I was well feed.

Mr.Marris always talked with me listening to every word and telling me stories of his past. When I become older Mr.Marris would pay me and my uncle Bill to cut the flowers and shrubs down so he would not have to mow around them. You see he knew Mrs. Marris wouldn't make a fuss with me over it. Slowly Mr.Marris had all but three shrubs removed, nothing said to me, now I don't know about him, he may have been in trouble with each shrub I cut.

Over the years Mr.and Mrs.Marris became more like family than just people across the road. Everyone in our family had Mr.Marris as there emergency contact, that's how much we trusted him.

I have never called either one of them by there first name until I visited them in the hospital last week. When I told them both I loved them and walked out the door it felt like I was possibly say goodbye to another set of grandparents. I will truly miss my little buddy.
