“ I watched you suffer to the point that I felt like I was just being selfish by asking God to keep you here but I didn't have the heart to tell you it was ok and let you go. God's will was done and now you can rest in peace. Jammie I love you beyond measure and I'm going to miss you every day of my life. I going to miss the talks we had, some serious bcz you didn't want to open up to anyone else about certain things so you would tell your frustrations to me and Mom, knowing we would listen, give you our honest opinion and try to help you in that situation all we could without getting to involved, and then there were the silly joking conversations that sometimes we laughed until we cried. So far the hardest thing I've ever faced in life was Sunday morning, having to look at you and face the fact that I would never get to sit and chit chat with you again, that I would never be able to pick up the phone and call you daily, sometimes very serious calls and other times you answering the phone me belling out a stupid song and God knows I can't sing a lick and you would laugh and say "lord have mercy" have you lost your mind, or you would say your like me there's no help for you.. I'll cherish every memory I have with you. Yes you left us Sunday morning, and you fought a very long and tiring fight. Now is your time, your time to finally rest, your time to never feel pain again, your time to let everyone deal with their own problems and the burdens that was put up on you. NOW IS YOUR TIME. And it's about time. As hard as it is to let you go I know you're much better off. I'm sorry for all the times that I should have been there and wasn't (I'll never forgive myself for that) but I'm grateful for the time God blessed me with you. I love you and until we meet again I'll carry you in my heart.

“ Mom, Missy, Nita, Robert, Kristie, I am so sorry. Jammie was one of a kind. He loved his family beyond measure. Jammie was my brother and I love him more than he ever knew. I won't be able to be there, but my heart truly is broken. He will be greatly missed. I love you Jammie. Now go with daddy and rest in peace.
