“ My condolences. Clyde was a regal woman, always a strong and vibrant presence even through her sickness. She was a great conversationalist and made the best of her life, it seemed to me("bloom where you're planted"). I will remember her bright eyes, inquisitive always, and her loving daughters.

“ When i first met Clyde,I loved her so much. She was so special to me and everyone that knew her. I remember one night I asked her where she had been that day and she said "here and there, and more here than there" I would go out on the floor several times a night and she would always reach and ask for me to come there. I would feed her sherbet at night and she'd always say thats good.

The very last few words she spoke to me where "Mmm, you smell so good!" I am so glad that I took a picture of Clyde on Halloween Night.
