“ No words, I'm sure, could even begin to comfort you all and i have no idea what i could say b/c "i'm sorry" seems so empty..youre living thru what i can only see as my worst nightmare and i feel so much sadness knowing that you would have to live thru it. i want you to know that you are in my thoughts and if you ever need someone just to talk to then i'd be glad to listen or just be someone for you to be with if you ever feel alone and i truely mean it..becky hicks elswick(friend of dawn)

“ I went to bed the other night with you on my mind. As I laid there I began to pray. Words cannot comfort, hugs and friends cannot take away the pain. The numbness will fade. I tried to imagine what it must be like, if was impossible. Then I tried ti imagine all the wonderful things your little angel must be experiencing now. I could imagine hime holding the hand of an Angel of the Lord dressed all in white. I could imagine Ryan holding the hand of that Angel as they walked through the gates of Heaven, the angel answering all Ryan's questions about all the amazing things he saw around him. How the Angel all in white so tenderly holding Ryan's hand leaned down and explained that he would soon meet two very special men. One of whom savced the world, his creator, the Son of God, named Jesus. The other one whom during his life made the world just that much brighter, a man he would know as Popaw. I could just imagine then in sight of Ryan and the Angel two men, one of whom with red hair down on one knee awaiting their arrival and behind him stood Jesus. I could just imagine that at that moment Ryan knew the man was Popaw as he dropped that Angel's hand and ran into his Popaw's arms. I imagined his Popaw holding him so tight, a smile appeared upon the face of Jesus as he wanted the two. Then gently laying a his head on Ryan's head the Lord introduced that day a grandfather and grandson. As I have thought about you this is the only thought I could imagine that didn't make me question the Lord or wonder why you had been cheated your time with Ryan. But, I do know that your little angel now sits on the lap of a King and plays before his thrown, where his perfect body will fail him no more. I imagine him there playing before the Lord and what a great big smile he must have on his face, one so bright that I pray it provides your hearts with peace all the way from Heaven.
